

Notes of the Day.

Butler wants book-keeping taught in our schools.

Jay Gould is said to be pale and cadaverous looking.

A demand for vaccine virus comes from Georgia places.

Roscoe Conkling's beard has become nearly snow white.

Dr. Susan Edson has just celebrated her sixtieth birthday.

Two Atlanta dogs slew ninety-two rats in thirty-five busy minutes.

Clover grows luxuriantly in Minnesota vales where it wouldn't sixteen years ago.

At the three vegetarian restaurants in London an average of 1,550 dinners are served daily.

A marriage notice in the Elmira Advertiser tops off in this way: "No cards, no cake, no flowers, no presents and nobody's business."

A man drew a crowd at Westfield, Mass., by going home with a fashionable bonnet on his head. He was winning that article on a wager.

California is not generally considered a cotton state, yet one plantation in Sonoma county this season yielded 40,000 pounds from 225 acres.

According to a local newspaper, cattle valued at $13,500,000 are now grazing in what was six years ago absolutely Indian country in Texas.

Manitoba bachelors are advertising in Canadian papers for wives. Any young lady who can milk, chop wood, run a plow and stack hay, has no trouble in finding a good husband.

Hole-in-the-Day, a Chippewa Indian, and son of the famous chief of that name, started out on a lecturing tour in Minnesota. His first audience yielded him $2.50, and that ended the venture.

A girl traveled all the way from Massachusetts to Montana to marry a man whom she had never seen, but who by letter had promised to wed her. She searched the Territory in vain for him.

The New York Evening Post says that it is the right of trial by jury that encourages suits for breach of promise; and intimates that if tried by judges, very few plaintiffs would make out their cases.

The Philadelphia Record publishes a list showing that no less than two hundred and seven persons mysteriously disappeared from that city in 1882, of whom no trace has ever been obtained by the police or any one else.

Lord Rosebery's Christmas gift to the tenants on his Mentmore estates was the remission of 15 per cent. of their half-yearly rent. He had done the same for six years previously. He also gave every cottager in the villages on his estates six hundred weight of coal, and a joint of beef, of weight proportioned to the size of the family.

Manuel Blasos, commonly called "Old Blazes," is a New Mexican gambler, with a portable hell on wheels. This is a car, something like those used by traveling photographers, but is as bright and gay as a circus band wagon, and is drawn by six handsome horses. The interior contains a faro table, a roulette wheel, and other fixtures for gambling. Manuel has several assistants and goes from place to place according to the outlook for profitable business. Thus he is sure to appear at every large fair within 200 miles of the Mexican border on either side. A new and prosperous mining camp offers inducements, too, and lately he established himself close to a Texas camp meeting with pecuniary profit. He has the reputation of running square games, and his party goes so well armed that they defy robbers.
